

Dean of the School of Education

St. John Fisher College, an independent, liberal arts institution in the Catholic tradition located in Rochester, New York, invites applications, expressions of interest, and nominations for an outstanding academic leadership opportunity as the new Dean of the Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. School of Education. The position is available beginning July 1, 2020.

Founded in 1948, St. John Fisher College is ranked among the top colleges and universities in the northeast. The next Dean will be an energetic, forward-looking, collaborative leader skilled in change management and transformational leadership. With a full array of undergraduate and master's level teaching programs and an executive leadership doctoral program, the School serves the teacher training and leadership needs of the greater Rochester area, as well as the Western New York region. The Dean will lead the School of Education through current changes in teacher education and articulate a shared vision for the School within the context of the institutional strategic plan. The Dean is the academic leader and chief administrative officer of the School and reports directly to the Provost for all aspects of the operation of the School, including its conduct and development as an instructional, research, and service unit.
